TO HOLD LIVE PIGEON SHOOT

The Warrenton Hunt Club
Rides in Heavy Weather.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)
WARRENTON, VA., March 18.—A pigeon shoot is the next thing on the programme here. However, the inhuman clay pigeon will not this time be subjected to a merciless rain of lead, but the "real thing" will have to stand the brunt of it all. Efforts are now being made to secure a number of birds. The range is to be twenty-five yards, and great sport is predicted for the near future. The hunt club followed the noise-seed bag at so hot a pace Tuesday that the elements were scarcely heeded or even noticed in the excitement. The hounds were thrown in at Oakwood gate and from there throughout the course some of the "heaviest going" of the season was experienced.

Mr. Julian Keith sustained a fall which did him no harm. Finishing at Drake's farm, six miles out of town, the riders regaled themselves at a delightful breakfast, where Mr. and Mrs. Drake were the host and hostess.

The fox hunt Saturday, the 19th, was of great interest. The party of huntsmen left town Friday and spent the night at the Plains. By sunrise next morning they were well on their way to Zulia, where the fun began in earnest, a long and exciting chase resulting.

It is stated that J. R. Townsend, of New York, well known in sporting circles here, has leased a place near The Plains, to Lieutenant Robert Wallach, U. S. A., at present stationed in Washington, was here for a few days this week.

Mr. Frederick McIlhenny, of Washington, is visiting friends in town.

Little Sorrel, General T. J. Jackson's War Horse.

MOLASSES AS HORSE FEED.

Charawind Goes to Memphis.
Death of Strontia—Mr. Be-vill Buys Professor.

One of the most noted war horses known to history in the annals of the Southern Confederacy is the chestnut gelding, "Fancy," or "Little Sorrel," as the horse was affectionately named by the second corps. He was owned by General T. J. Jackson, who fell from Little Sorrel's back at Chancellorsville mortally wounded, after riding him safely through the battles of First Manassas, Kennington, McDowell, Winchester, Port Republic, Cross Keys, on the Chickahominy, at Cedar Mountain, Second Manassas, Sharpsburg, Harper's Ferry, Fredericksburg, and at last at Chancellorsville.

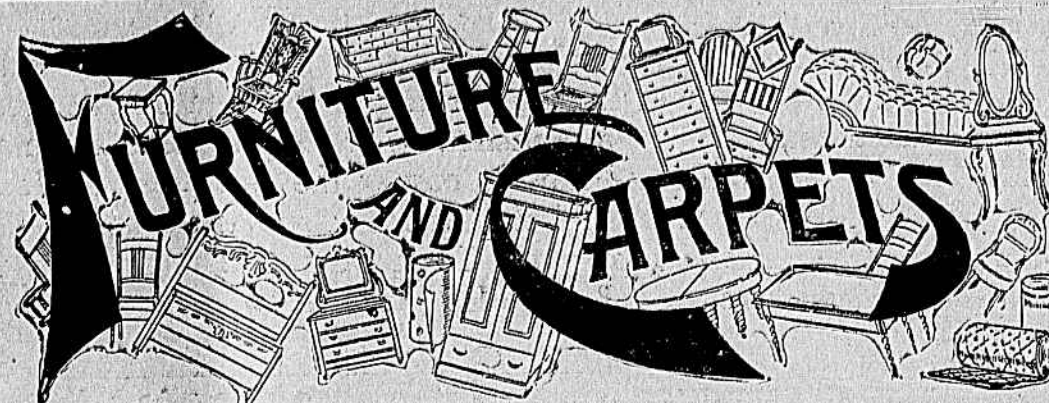

General T. J. Jackson, "Stonewall," was wounded on this horse on the night of May 2, 1862, and passed away seven days later, aged 39 years. After General Jackson was wounded, Little Sorrel escaped into the Federal lines, and was captured the following morning by the second corps, under command of J. E. B. Stuart. Little Sorrel was presented to the Soldiers' Home, Richmond, Va., in 1881, by General Jackson's widow, Mrs. Mary Anna Jackson, of Charlotte, N. C. He was exhibited at the New Orleans Exposition in 1885, after which he was returned to the Soldiers' Home, where he died in November, 1887, at the age of thirty-six years. After his death, the body of Little Sorrel was carefully prepared by a taxidermist, and now mounted and shown in a glass case, forms an object of interest to visitors from many different sections and climes.

A Department of Agriculture bulletin contains the following on feeding molasses to horses: G. H. Berns reports the successful feeding of molasses to 100 draft horses, working ten hours a day, hauling very heavy loads, usually a mile or more. The horses averaged 1,700 in weight, and were fed per head, night and morning, one quart of molasses diluted with three quarts of water and thoroughly mixed with six pounds of cut hay of good quality, 1.5 quarts of cornmeal and 2.5 quarts of coarse bran. In addition they were fed four quarts of dry oats in the middle of the day and 11 pounds of long hay at night. It is stated that the horses gradually improved in condition and gained

Imp. Charaxus and Helwind, by Bolus, probably ranks second to no jumper in training, and it would not be surprising to see him rest the championship from Land of Clover, that other Virginia bred steeple chase horse during the season of 1904.

The gray gelding, Strontia, 2:14½, who trotted to his record a decade since, and was looked upon as one of the stoutest hearted of Virginia bred trotters, is dead. A son of Sam Purdy, 2:20½, dam, Madge, by Zirkle's Engineer, the Year Book does not give his exact age, but he was foaled back in the eighties and bred by A. E. Heneberger, of Harrisonburg. Like that other gray trotter by the same sire, Charlie C., 2:19½, Strontia was successfully campaigned back in the nineties by Barney Demarest.

The Spring race meeting of the Roanoke Industrial and Agricultural Association will be held at Roanoke, Va., May 26, 27 and 28, when purses will be offered for trotters and pacers. The dates selected are those of the U. C. T. meeting, when a large crowd is expected in town, and Secretary W. L. Andrews feels sure that the attendance will be good and fine sport witnessed.

The Norfolk Horse Show and Fair Association will hold a Spring meeting early in May, and will select dates preceding those of the meeting to be held in Baltimore during that month. This association has purchased the Norfolk Fair Grounds with the spacious buildings and track, which eminently fits them to hold fairs, race meetings and horse shows.

The Wythe County Live Stock and Agricultural Fair Association has been organized at Wytheville, Va., and will hold fairs and race meetings during each fall. The officers are: S. S. Casell, president; Dr. William T. Graham, vice-president; L. P. Krenning, secretary; W. B. Casell, assistant secretary; S. W. Browning, treasurer.

Ulysses D. Benner, M. F. H., Warrenton, Va. Hunt, has issued his fixtures for the Spring runs. The season opened March 1st, and extends to the middle of April, when the Virginia hold their annual "Point to Point" races at 3 miles for both heavy and lightweight jumpers.

C. L. Bevil, Fayetteville, N. C., has purchased of R. D. Pendleton & Son, National Stock Yards, Illinois, the fast gelding Professor, by Constantine, 2:12½, dam, Zella, by Kentucky Prince, 2:47. This horse has trotted a trial in 1:19½, and is considered quite a prospect for speed.

The Ellerslie bred mare Ollie Beile, full sister to Chardale, by Imp. Charaxus, dam, Ada Belle, by Bolus, foaled at Beaumont Farm, Lexington, on the 9th instant, a bay filly, by Sanders, son of Hanover and Imp. Constantinople, by Lord Lyon.

Blue Miracle, bay colt, 4, by Miracle, dam, Ada Belle, by Hindeo, bred by Robert Bradley, Wilcox, What, Va., won at Ascot Park, California, on the 8th instant, at six furlongs in 1:15, finishing ahead of Marsa and eight others.

"I removed his glasses carefully and wiped them."

"I find," he heartily replied, "that they have a marked tendency to increase the maximum of endurance in the wind to the short lamb—a quotation that is frequently misquoted by the unlearned and the careless to the Scriptures."

And Brother Charlie Lefew told him how to help out the sale of Gold Cup.

"You see," said Charles, "you are supposed to be sitting at the table at the Commercial or Lawrence's, or even Davy Connelley or Dick Williams', or at a good place, reading the paper."

"I come in and see you sitting there. I ask you to join me. You refuse at first, but I insist, and then you come up to the counter and say:

"Give me some Golden Cup."

"He may not have it, but you insist, and then I take an order. Understand?"

"Yep."

Then they went to Lawrence's. The comrade went back and sat down.

He picked up a paper when he saw Charlie enter, and pretended not to see him.

"Hello, Comrade!" said Charles: "Join me."

"Don't care if I do."

"What'll you have?"

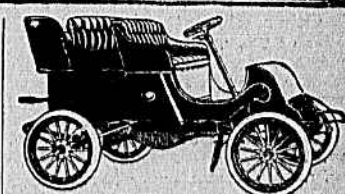

The comrade could not think of the name of the stuff that Charles was boasting, but he did recollect about the label, so he said:

"Give me a Silas Johnson cigar."

We are so glad there is going to be some base-ball this summer, for we like to throw rocks at the umpire. If there is anything we like better than cussing a street car motorman who won't wait for you, it is calling an umpire a thief and a robber and a liar. He can't get at a fellow behind the wire-netting, so it's safe to call him anything that he thinks he looks like. Then, again, a fellow likes a little excitement. He likes to salute himself hears when the score is close, and somebody puts the ball over the fence for a home run.
